

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA
TWIN CITIES

Laboratory of Physiological Hygiene
School of Public Health
Stadium Gate 27
611 Beacon Street S.E.
Minneapolis, Minnesota 55455

September 30, 1982

Joseph Anderson, Ph.D.
Nutrition Consultant
Laboratory of Physiological Hygiene
School of Public Health
Health Sciences Unit A

Dear Joe:

We have over the years since your retirement been exceedingly fortunate to have your thoughtful and productive input. We want that to continue just as it is and want to continue your Emeritus appointment and provide your desk and secretarial support, such as they are. But due to severe exigencies in funding, we are going to have to discontinue even the small economic contribution which has by no means been commensurate with your productivity and contributions to the Lab.

We hope that you will still be willing and able to make your academic contributions to the Lab but without guarantees of economic support. Of course, if grant applications go in, in which your consultation is appropriate, we will attempt to develop that in the future. You also should feel quite free to submit your own requests for small grants for analyses or your own secretarial support, which would be no burden or strain on yourself.

Please let me know if this causes any inconvenience. I will ask you to work out with Dean Surbey the actual conditions of discontinuing the payment which would be most favorable to us and to you in regard to taxes.

Cordially,

Henry Blackburn, M.D.
Professor and Director

/jml

pc: R. Prineas