Dear Mr. Bolin:

I have been unable to reach you by phone so am sending this note. I am sorry to introduce myself under these circumstances, but I felt that you would appreciate being notified. I reside at 7801 Pickfair Drive and park my cars in front of that residence. While on a recent trip out of town your boy Dan was observed tampering with my small green English car. The radiator cap was missing on my return and the gas cap partly open. Fortunately, these findings called my attention to the fact that sand and gravel had been poured into each opening.

My car was towed to the shop for removal of the radiator and gas tank and their thorough cleaning. I am certain that if my son were involved in such pranks, which most kids seem to get into at this age, I should want to know it both for disciplining him, and for making restitution for the damages he caused.

Please be good enough to contact me soon about this and let me know what action you think is appropriate.

Cordially yours,

Henry W. Blackburn, M.D.
