Dear Henry:

Many thanks for your note. But you're the one to be congratulated if you've got people "rapping in the lab at night again."

When I was there, the national climate was very different from the current one. The war was over and the horizons unlimited. But I see nothing comparable now that the Viet Nam fracas is winding down. On the contrary, there's a milieu of fear and caution just now. I hope I live long enough to see the pendulum swing.

Meantime, the business of giving away money instead of begging for it is proving to be the most constructive thing I could have done.

Warmest regards to all of you,

Yours sincerely,

Carle
