

September 21, 1977

Victor Cohn
Washington Post
Washington, D.C. 20071

Dear Vic:

It was good to hear from you. I am sorry I don't get to read you more. I would imagine that George Mann's arguments are countered in the enclosed. It seems easier for the intelligent layman to understand the arguments I have made here (as a public health view) than it does for academicians and practitioners.

At any rate, things are moving forward and it is probably just the beginning of the diet-heart era. I also enclose an editorial which dichotomizes the arguments about atherosclerosis.

Cordially,

Henry Blackburn, M.D.
Professor and Director

HB/as enclosures