Dear Hal:

Many thanks for your cordial note. The issue of whether the University of Minnesota will support my efforts and whether I can support the Lab of Physiological Hygiene will be clarified in the next period. Sixteen Minnesota winters are also a long stretch--for a Floridian.

To save you an air ticket maybe you could find a free period just before or after Anaheim when I could stop by. How about Tuesday the 9th or Monday the 15th of November?

I'm now under a thatched roof in the dunes of Agios Gordis, one of the world's finer coves, on Corfu, rewriting some fun things on the ECG in prognosis post-infarction, including the importance of extrasystoles, from Coronary Drug Project data. The great thing about the warmth of Greece is that it melts off a superficial crust, but doesn't fry the mind! It's easy to see how so much got started here in civilized thinking.

Again thanks for your good thoughts, and highly appealing idea of working with you and your crew.

See you soon,

Henry Blackburn, M.D.

Dear Henry:

I have recently heard via grapevine that you might possibly be thinking of relocating in a western place. If you are, indeed, in the academic marketplace it could be that we here at UCLA would have a slot that might appeal to you. If you have any interest at all why don't you slip me a copy of your curriculum vitae. We might just be willing to send you a plane ticket to visit for a look see and a talk about opportunities.

Call me if you are in a hurry -- Phone (213) 825-5136.

Sincerely yours,
