Dear George:

I get more out of your classic 1969 Green Journal article with each reading. Henry Taylor has never succeeded in getting our work written down but it may be forthcoming before long.

I have recently written up the enclosed small part of that experience and would welcome your comments on it if it interests you. Meager as the results are, it has encouraged us enough to try to undertake a "multifactor intervention" on ventricular ectopic beats in "high risk" men.

The analysis does not consider adequately the point you make about warm up dysrhythmias and we will try to consider this.

We were happy that your colleague could be selected for the Singapore symposium. My chronic prostatitis, though improving, has led me to resign from that faculty unfortunately, but it should be a good session. If there are other interested types at Vanderbilt, we would like to have them here for a period, as in the enclosed ads.

Cordially,

Henry Blackburn, M.D.
Professor and Director and
Professor of Medicine
