Corresp.

Dear Henry:

I enjoyed seeing you at The Homestead and I particularly enjoyed your discussion on Monday morning. I have been reading this morning the article in the May issue of Circulation that you wrote jointly with multiple other people regarding the exercise electrocardiogram and I think it is a very sound position.

You raised the question of whether I had ever given any philosophical talks, and I admitted that I had and I enclose a copy of one. You will have to remember that this talk was pitched to what I thought was the proper level of the audience. When I first wrote this and tried it out on Carolyn, she remarked that it was a fine talk but by the third paragraph, nobody was going to be listening. I think it is a sound principle that one must reach the audience at a reasonable level.

I hope you had a pleasant journey to New York and Germany and an easy return to Minneapolis.

It was particularly pleasant being with Bill Hunzicker and his charming family. They are delightful people.

Sincerely,

Howard McCue, Jr., M. D.
