Dear Dr Blackburn:

Thank you for your response to my impromptu television interview. You have made an important point: The social burden of wilfully caused illnesses, whether by individuals or by corporate producers of pollutants. Though I have not written specifically on these matters, perhaps you would be interested in a chapter of my 'The Pentagon of Power' (Harcourt Brace paperback, 1970) See 'Promises, Brides, Threats,' especially particularly 'The Threat of Parasitism,' pp 335-345.

With warm respects

Faithfully yours

Lewis Mumford
