Dear Henry:

Patience, dear friend! The risk factors panel is being edited now, and a copy should go out to you in a week or so. As you may know, Ann Holmes left in December, and I have produced the magazine single-handed with the help of a part-time freelance copy editor ever since. In fact, I am the only full-time person on the editorial staff. Have about had it! I enjoy working hard but this is a bit too much. At the moment, I am wrestling with a job offer that is really too much money to turn down, but something I had never envisioned for myself, namely, a vice presidency of a big Madison Avenue communications-public relations company. It would mean I could quit worrying about the financial aspects of Jerry's coronary heart disease, but I probably would heartily dislike what I would be doing. Will let you know what I decide. In the meantime, don't despair--the panel discussion will be in shape for my successor to publish sometime in the spring.

Sincerely,

Genell

Dear

Friend -

Return of it!
It would be the last to apply pressures. I was simply cautious.
As for being a V-P, you never know until you try it!
Respectfully
