Dear Professor Truswell:

This note is to let you know that my plans are proceeding well. I enclose my travel schedule. If there is a serious problem with the arrival or departure date, please let me know. I have, through a former student, obtained a handbook of the Commonwealth Institute of Health for 1980. I see that my visit falls squarely in your summer season. There was no mention of summer school activities.

In addition to an ambitious schedule of planning and writing, I will be grateful to talk to you and Professor Kerr about your teaching of nutrition and epidemiology in the Commonwealth Institute. I'm not sure whether I mentioned to you in my earlier correspondence that the Laboratory of Physiological Hygiene, more or less an autonomous research institute for the last forty years, will be merging with the Division of Epidemiology next year and I will head the combined divisions. So I need your the ideas on graduate education in these areas.

I realize that I am arriving close to the holidays. I want to be sure that no one's social or family plans are in any way displaced by this arrival. If they threaten to be, I will simply knock about Bali or somewhere and come after the holidays. However, my time is so limited in Sydney that I would like to plan the mid-December arrival. Promise me there will be no special efforts or changes in your plans for holidays. I need and seek this private time and you must feel no obligations.

I might try once again to reach you by telephone to confirm these things. I see that your term lets out in mid-November but hope you might be available during Thanksgiving week. Would you be kind enough to propose by letter a date and time for a call?
