Dear Sir:

I'm wondering where I have been all these years not to have discovered your station. I suppose that it's because the dials in my cars are spun by teen-agers with their particular tastes. It has been a week since I discovered your station and I have held off my enthusiasm to see how long the romance lasted. For a full week I have not been disappointed and am amazed to know the amount of news, interviews, reviews, and up-to-date summaries which actually exist and which are eeked out to us by most other electronic media.

Your station is a public service of the first order and you have my full attention whenever I am in my automobile. Many thanks.

Cordially,

Henry Blackburn, M.D.
