Dear Ancel:

I found your lengthy comment on the review in Food and Nutrition when I returned from Atlantic City. Your points certainly seem well taken but I wonder if you aren't making too big a fuss over it. I don't know how influential the journal is in circles outside their own little clique of frustrated old maids and fuddy-duddies. As far as the public is concerned, I think it much more important for you to get good reviews in the J.A.M.A. and in the specialty journals. It would also be quite a stroke if a sophisticated lay journal such as Harper's or The New Yorker would review it. I don't know how to arrange any of these reviews but will be very glad to write one of them from the point of view of the cardiologist. George Burch occasionally sends me books for review in the American Heart Journal and I may be able to get him to let me do yours. In any case, I doubt that the meat folk will be able to do you much harm.

Cordially,

Carleton B. Chapman, M.D.
Professor of Medicine
