

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA
TWIN CITIES

Division of Epidemiology
School of Public Health
Stadium Gate 27
611 Beacon Street S.E.
Minneapolis, Minnesota 55455
(612) 624-5400

August 12, 1987

Tom and Ann Tamlyn
155 East 49th Street
Apartment 5D
New York, NY 10017

Dear Ann and Tom:

How nice to get the little note from you and your change of telephone number. My tradition since the departure of the American Heart Association from Manhattan has been to avoid New York. I overfly it on all occasions, and it's too bad. I will try to do better, and hope to stop down and see you.

Why not take a nice rambling Fall trip to the Twin Cities and stay in our third floor apartment in our old 1900 house on Lake of the Isles in downtown Minneapolis. We would love to see you. Much has happened since our last brief visit, and most of it is better saved for our time together.

I think you know the basics. Nelly and I found that the death of John didn't bring us closer together. I left her in 1982, we were divorced in 1984, and she was remarried to a very fine Honeywell engineer in 1985. So, we don't have to worry about Nelly, emotionally or economically.

Nelly remarried on the same weekend that my father died, Labor Day weekend, 1985, so you can imagine that was a pretty low point for me. I have quite recovered and have a charming companion who has been with me for two years, a 33 year-old journalist, Stacy Richardson, who shares many interests, including that she sings the blues with my jazz activities.

Life is good to us.

Love,

Henry