

UNIVERSITY OF MINNESOTA
TWIN CITIES

Corresp- Dunton

Division of Epidemiology
School of Public Health
Stadium Gate 27
611 Beacon Street S.E.
Minneapolis, Minnesota 55455
(612) 624-5400

December 1, 1987

Ronald Dunton
No. 1 Highgate Road
Santa Cruz, CA 95061

Dear Ron and Terry:

Well, we're back and halfway settled. I've appreciated nice notes from both you and Carter, which arrived just before I returned.

Here there's a fire to put out every day and some of them threaten to be holocausts.

I have a short trip planned for San Francisco January 25-27 with the National Research Council Diet-Health Committee. I'm hoping I can persuade Stacy to come (she has no holidays left) and it would be great to see you and Terry.

We were able to swing a delightful adventure for one short week on the isle of Crete in September, where we met Katia and her new boyfriend, Reiner, and climbed the famous Gorge of Samaria from bottom to top in a delightful long day. Incidentally, he has a career interest that you might be able to guide him in. He's written a book on cross-country mountaineering and is writing another one, and is an extremely bright philosophy major, but hasn't quite found a way to put it together. I'm not anxious to encourage him to go for a Ph.D. though he's capable of it. It seems to me that with his business sense and writing skills in health and fitness that he might find satisfaction in the health industry, along the lines of Whitney, Inc. He and Katia would be enthusiastic to pull some oars with you and Terry around the San Juan islands anytime that you visit there, or otherwise want to stop over. I would be very grateful if, when you plan your next trip to that area, you might give Katia a buzz with the idea of meeting this vigorous and vivacious young couple. Katia still hangs on in the Associated Press because she's so in love with Seattle and the mountains. Her address and phone number are below:

Katia Blackburn
5415 Baker Avenue NW
Seattle, WA 98107
(206) 784-5129

Hope to see you before too long.

Cordially,

Henry and Stacy

HEALTH SCIENCES